PIE POISONING.

Terrible Experience of Another Family Brought to Light.

HOSTLER MULVAY'S SUFFERINGS.

Mr. Schinkel Describes His Method of Making Pies.

The legal doubts of the connection between the death of Mr. George Wheeler, of No. 413 West Fortythird street, and the eating of a lemon meringue pie, said to have been bought at Mr. Schinkel's bakery, on Eighth avenue, seem likely to be dissi-pated by the light of yesterday's developments remains in the morning, after which a quiet funeral was held and the body was any legal proof that the pie was the immediate cause of the poisoning, and the doubt whether the analysis of the stomach would show anything con-clusively, on account of the length of time Mr. celer was sick before he died, made it exceedingly doubtful whether the real cause of death would ever be a matter of record. During the sy, however, a man who gave his name as Stephen Mulvay appeared at the residence of the Wheelers and told a remarkable story. He had seen in the HERALD the account of the poisoning, and called to express his sympathy and to say that he too had been poisoned by a meringue pie, bought the same night as Mr. Wheeler's, at Schinkel's bakery. He and his wife and little child had all come near death, and they had no doubt about the pie's being the cause of their iliness. He referred to his physician, Dr. O'Reilly, of No. 303 West Forty-second street, in reference to his illness, and described it as being of exactly the same nature as that of the Wheelers.

MULVAY'S STORY.

Mulvay is a hostler by occupation and is employed in the Brunswick stables. He occupies, with his family, a suit of rooms in the rear of the top floor of the tenement house No. 304 West Thirty-eighth street. His appearance is that of a sober, indus-

I cannot describe to you the pain I suffered. It seemed as it there was a big ball of fire in the pit of my stomach. My lips, mouth, throat, and indeed all inside of me, feit as raw as though I had been burned by fire, while from my lips thick pieces of skin, as thick as a half dollar sliver piece, peeled off. There is not a shadow of doubt in my mind that we were poisoned by soraething in that pie."

While this conversation was going on "little Jimmy," who has entirely recovered, was playing about the floor, and the door of the bedroom in which Mrs. Mulvay lay was open, so that she could hear all that was said. Her husband frequently referred to ner to corroborate his statements, and she herself said that she purchased the pie at Schinkel's. "Do you know of any one clse in the neighborhood being sitek from the same cause?"

"Well, I do know of one, but it wouldn't do to give the information."

Subsequently it transpired that the person he supposed to be sick was Mr. McGuinness, to whom his wife had given the balance of the pie.

He said that at about half-past eight o'clock on Monday morning, November 17, he was summoned to treat Mr. Mulvay, whom he found in the greatest agony, rolling over and over on his floor and vomiting at frequent intervals. "He was in such great pain," said the Doctor, "that he would hardly allow me to feel his pulse or take his temperature. Of course I recognized that the first thing to do was to give something to relieve his pain, so I adminiscered a mustard poultice to the bowels and stomach and gave him Squibb's compound tincture of opium, which contains opium and chiloroform."

chiereform."

"What effect did it have?"

"It relieved him. But I was called again at a little after noon of the same day and found that he was taken again with the terribic pains, and that Mrs. haven was suffering with exactly the same symptoms. Then I was certain that something they had eaten contained violent irritant poison, and I treated them for it, giving the usual alleviations. The little child was taken sick in the same way, but not at all violently, and when I learned that they had a lemon méringue pie for the sunday dinner, and that the child had only eaten a very small piece, while the father and mother had eaten more, I had no doubt the pie contained the poison. I had thought at first that it might be in some cranberry same which they had caten at the same meal, but Mrs. Mulvay was positive that it was the pie, and when I learned that the child had eaten only a mouthful or so I agreed with her. I supposed from the symptoms that the poison was very probably subsectate of copper, or vordigris, which had been derived from some dish in which their food had been cooked, and I at once shaped the treatment accordingly. I gave them milk and the white of eags, hopling to alleviate the irritation; but was the third day before they could retain anything on their stomachs—i mean, of course, the parents. The child's thiness was only trifling. They are all one of danger now. I think, though, the parents are both in a very bad condition."

"How do you account for the fact that Mrs. Mulvay was not taken sick until four hours after her husband?"

"It was entirely a matter of constitution. You might give one person two ounces of brandy and he "Did you find out anything about the pio?"

"Yos. I asked Mrs. Mulvay first if she made the pie herseif, and she said she had not; she had bought it at bechniker's bakery, in Eighti avounce, on Saturday evening. I then asked her if it had all been eaten, and she said no, but at first was excoedingly reluctant to tell what had become of what was left. I pressed the question, however, and finally she told me that she nad given it to a Mr. McGuinness, a frend of theirs, who had called to see them atter dinner. Mr. McGuinness, she said, kept a smail grocery store at No. 321 West Fortysecond street, and was a very poor man, who had trouble to get along and whom she occasionally helped with little preachts. Mr. McGuinness, she said, had taken the pie home with him.
I went to see McCuinness, and he told not believe him, for he was evidently very sick at the time I saw him, and was suffering pain. However, as he said he had not oaten it, but had thrown it away, I could do no more. I sent word to Mr.
Schinnes that I waites to see him, and he came around here, but denied the story entirely."

"Me do not deny seiling a meriange pie?"

"No, but he denied that there was any acid in the composition of it which would cause the formation of verdigris. I questioned him, and so did my partler, Dr. Wilcox, who has been with me in the case, about the way in which he made his pies, but he said that he flavored them with oil of lemon. I tell. Now I do not understand how he can make an acid pie without using acid."

"How could the sub-acetate of copper (which you say you suppose the poison to have been have been formed?"

formed?"
"By the contact of almost any acid with copper, or by the copper vessel in which Mr. Schinkel says he made the pics being allowed to remain without being cleaned after it had been used."
"Would any other substance than an acid cause the formation?"
"Yes, various substances."

made the pies being allowed to remain without being cleaned after it had been used."

"Would any other substance than an acid cause the formation?"

"Yee, various substances. Butter would, milk might. But Mr. Schinkel expressly denied that his bake shop was kept scrupulously clean. I was unable to learn from the conversation, though I tried hard, how the verdigris was found."

THE MAN WHO ATE NO FIE.

Mr. McGuinness keeps a small grocery store in the basement of No. 321 West Forty-second street. When asked about his visit to the Mulvays, a week ago last Sunday, he admitted the facts as stated by Mirs. Mulvay to be true. He said that they pressed him to take the balance of the pie, and out of consideration for their feelings he cousenfed. He wrapped it up in a piece of paper and carried it home, but when he got there he found company, and so he put the pie aside. On the following morning he found that it had got mussed up and did not look fit to eat, and subsequently it was thrown out. He reiterated that he had not partaken of any of the pie, nor had any member of the family. "Shure, I suppose I would have been sick, too, like the rest of them if I had," he said. While he was talking his wife came in from another spartment and said the piece of pie had been "thrown into the ash barrel long ago." Mr. McGuinness also stated that he had been at the home of the Mulvays on the morning after he had taken the pie home and called the doctor for them. This contradicts Mr. Mulvay's statement, however, that he had not seen McGuinness for four days.

Mr. Schinkel refused to talk to a Henald reporter. Aside from his conversation with Dr. O'Rielly, however, which is related above, he did talk to one other person, who questioned him closely about the way in which the pies were made. To this person Mr. Schinkel is not considered biamable in the matter by any of the sufferers, excepting for figurance or carelessness. No malicious intent is imputed to him, nor could any reasonably be imputed, but he himself, it is evident from hi

THE SUPREME COURT SMILES AT A LAWYER APPLICATION-MR. CHATTERTON'S MARRIE

"It makes you smile, I notice," remarked a lawy in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, to Judg Lawrence. "It is enough to make one smile," answered th

Judge, "for certainly this is one of the most remark able applications I ever heard of." "I stand ready to prove all my allegations," said the counsel.

After the above observations between Judge Law rence and Fenton Rockwell, the latter proceeded to state his case more in detail. His story—the main facts of which, he said, were fully set forth in the complaint in the case-was that in 1837 Cornelia Wilcox, who was then about eighteen years of age, formed the acquaintance of George W. Chatterton; at that time she lived in Tompkins county, this State, and, after a short acquaintance, they were married by a justice of the peace at tion of his narrative he stated further that Chatter-ton abandoned his young wife on the 3d of July, ton abandoned his young wife on the 3d of July, 1830; that she afterward was told that he had gone to California; that subsequently news came to her that he was dead, and, not hearing from him, she supposed it true, and was firm in this belief until a few months ago, when she ascertained that her hushand was still alive, that he was a jeweller in this city, that he had been married again over forty years ago and had a wife still living and three grown up children.

"A very singular narrative," again remarked the Judge.

ago and had a wife still living and three grown up children.

"A very singular narrative," again remarked the Judge.

"It will be found more singular when all the facts are brought out," replied Mr. Rockwell, "as they certainly will be, for application will speedily be made for alimouy and counsel fee pending the proceedings for divorce."

After some further remarks by Mr. Rockwell, who is associated with Samuel G. Couriney as counsel for Mrs. Chatterton, as she calls herself, and Mr. John Berry, who appeared on behalf of Mr. Chatterton, in the course of which the latter counsel charged collusion between Rockwell and the plaintiff, and which charge Mr. Rockwell hurled back with indignation, Judge Lawrence said he would take the papers and inquire into the case.

The particular motion which elicited the above scene in court was one on behalf of Mr. Chatterton to compel the plaintiff to dis lose her place of residence. Among the p-pers read on this motion was an affidavit of the plaintiff stating that she dare not let Mr. Chatterton know her present whereabouts, as she is in mortal dread of him. She says that while they were living together as man and wife he said that if she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she gave birth to a child he would till it, and that she she has been engaged in business in springfield, lill, and in this city. CRIME IN NEW YORK.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF POLICE JUSTICES.

The record of crime in this city for the year end ing October 31, 1879, as embodied in the report of Secretary Cregier, of the Board of Police Justices, was submitted last night. From the figures it is evident that in spite of the expensive organization the taxpayers support and the work of charitable ties are not on the decrease. That there is room for the efforts of philanthropists and churchmen in a city of whose inhabitants almost fifty thousand have been disposed of by the police courts inside of twelve months no one will be apt to deny. The figures show, too, that vice, even if it does frequently go unpunished, has to take hazardous chances, as nearly seventy per cent of the people who have seen the inside of a court of justice during the past year have suffered penalties more or less severe.

The following is the total number of persons ar-

SHORT RANGE RIFLE SHOOTING.

An "Everybody's Match" at rife shooting closed on the 20th inst. at a Broadway range 100 feet in length. The match was open thirty days, and there were over ninety competitors. The conditions were seven shots off hand to each entry, and thirty prizes, consisting principally of bric-à-brac, were offered. Some of the gentlemen are well known at Creedmoor, and the list embraces a number of prominent business men who occasionally handle the rifle. The confestants who occasionally handle the rifle. fair game was the result. Each had many friends and the bookmakers in the vicinity of the hall were very busy attending to the wants of their customers. "I guess the balls are cold," said somehody, whereat there was a general laugh. Billy changed his cue before he attempted his sixth inning, remarking, "I guess I'll go back to old reliable." And "old reliable" it proved, as in finely executed style he made his buttons move along 55 points. Much of it was by open work. along 55 points. Much of it was by open work, and his ninth point was effected by a six cushion shot. A draw carelessly played sent him to his seat. Maurico with a determined visage commenced his half of the inning and was enabled to accumulate 24. The game thus in fair progress the audience settled down, ready to appreciate and applaud. The seventh and eighth efforts for each were exceedingly poor, and Daly in his ninth put 10 together, the score standing—Sexton, 62; Daly, 36. William could do no better than 5, and Maurice went to the front with 35, carefully played. William looked

The score now was-Slosson, 192; Schaefer, 28. The fifthe sawy by Slosson showed more splendid play, and he "bossed" the twories 48 points, and took nis seat with 240 to his credit, while Schaefer had but 27. This gave George an average to this juncture of 48, something marvellous under the new rules. Schaefer again approached the table, but he had lost heart, and the hitherto invincible seemed unable to do himself any sort of justice. He made a single carrom, and was then forced to give up. Once more the carroms foll from George's magic cue until 37 were rolled his way, and so on. Slosson remained the leader, and at the ninth inning lacked only 3 to give him the victory. These he was unable to make in the tenth and eleventh innings, and with a "now for your lite" expression, Schaefer went to work in the twelfth inning. He soon struck a racehorse gait, and on the rail quickly put together 65. Here he came to grief in the fatal triangle by not work in the balls out of the forbidden ground in the required two shots. Schaefer claimed they were out. Retwee Adams examined them closely and found them on the line, so his decision was against Jacob and in favor of Slosson, who quickly made 3 and "game," leaving Schaefer at 111 points. Schaefer was struck all aback by the wonderful work of his opponent, which, added to his Saturday's defeat, may in a mensure explain his unaccountable showing ef last night. ANOTHER SCULLING SCHEME. [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1879. To-day Colonel T. K. Fuller, president of a local patent medicine manufacturing company, anounces that he will hang up a purse of $7,000 to be rowed for over a five mile course on Ouondaga Lake by all first class oarsmen in the world, barring only by all first class oarsmen in the world, barring only Courtney and Hanian. The Fourth of July, 1880, is the day set for the race to be pulled. Colonel Fuller has not as yet fully decided upon the details of the contest beyond his determination to require an entrance of $500 from each contestant to guarantee the good faith of each. Messrs. Courtney and Haniau are barred, because Colonel Fuller believes that any man who permitted his backers to offer to buy a race for him, as Hanian did at Chautanqua, or another who arranged for a race and then sneaked out of it, as Courtney has done, should be tabooed from the sporting world.

COCK FIGHTING.

Vesterday arrangements were made for a homeand home interstate cocking main between two promient rival fanciers of New York and, Pennsylvania. Articles of agreement were drawn up and signed, and a forfeit of $500 earnest money posted for the event. The contracting parties signed an agree-ment that for the first tourney each side shall prodment that for the first tourney each side shall produce twenty-one cocks, at weights ranging from 4 lbs. 4 oz. to 5 lbs. 12 oz. and fight all that shall weigh within two ounces of each other for $50 a side each battle, and $500 a side the odd fight. It was further agreed that the first main should be fought within fifty miles of Philadelphia, on December 14. The conditions of the second or return main are similar to the above, with the exception that each side agrees to "show" seventeen inslead of twenty-one cocks. The New York rules are to govern both events, and "gaffs" one and a quarter inches in length are to be used by each. The date for

The race will continue for 6 days of 14 hours each. The American team will win if its highest four make a greater aggregate of miles than the English team's score after subtracting 100 miles from their (the English) aggregate number of miles.

PIGEON SHOOTING.

EATONTOWN, N. J., Nov. 24, 1879. There was a good gathering of New Jersey pigeon marksmen at this place to-day, to participate in the match for a prize gun, the conditions of which were and used fifteen pound dumb bells. In the first trial Haley covered 11 ft. 10½ in. Talbot followed and cleared 12 ft. 13½ in. Odds of 2 to 1 were now offered on Talbot, and in a few instances accepted. On the second trial Haley landed just one-half inch over Talbot's mark, covering 12 ft. 2½ in., and Talbot covered 12 ft. 3½ in. On the third trial Haley covered 12 ft. 2½ in. Talbot followed and covered 12 ft. 4½ in. Haley followed and failed to reach Talbot's mark by two inches, covering 12 ft. 2½ in., just one-quarter of an inch behind his best effort. Haley made two more efforts, but failed to reach Talbot's jump, and the latter was declared the winner. Talbot's best jump was 12 ft. 4½ in.; Haley, 12 ft. 3 in.

INSPECTOR BOLAND'S TRIAL

EVIDENCE FOR THE DEPENCE-THE CASE TO BE GIVEN TO THE JURY TO-DAY.

trial of Thomas Boland, charged with crimi nal neglect as an inspector of election, was continued before Judge Brady and a jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday, District Attorney Phelps and his assistant, Mr. Lyon, representing the prosecution and Mr. Ambrose H. Purdy the defence. Mr. Boland, the defendant, who had previously testified in his own behalf, was cross-examined at length by District Attorney Phelps. He stated that the returns were signed only after a count of the ballots. George Hall's name appeared on at least four different ballots, of some of which he could find but one ballot. He could not exactly explain why sam ples of these ballots were not attached to the one ballot. He could not exactly explain why sam ples of these ballots were not attached to the returns other than that the matter was overlooked or that he supposed it was the duty of the taily clerk, if any one, to attach them.

Charles Verrey, chairman of the republican committee of the same district, testified that he kept a sally and he ref on the evening of election the vote read off as 200 for Hall and 23 for Hatzell, which corresponded with his taily.

Alderman George Hall, one of the rival candidates at the election out of which the prosecution has arisen, was the next witness for the defence. He testified that on election night he went into one of the polls of this district and heard the announcement of the vote, and he considered himself then elected by 2,000 votes; he is positive one of the witnesses for the prosecution (Crutty) was not there; he never mentioned or suggested to any of the inspectors to alter the returns; his principal business in going into the polis on the night of the election was to pay the men who had been working for him because he did not sweak to Inspector Boland that night, notwithstanding the testimony of a witness to that effect; he knew the night before the election that he was being sold out in the interest of Hatzell, and that was the reason he made the deal between Tammany and the republicans.

On this state of the testimony Mr. Purdy asked the son he made the deal between Tammany asked the publicans.

On this state of the testimony Mr. Purdy asked the Court to instruct the jury to acquit on the ground that there was no evidence that the accused had made a false or fraudulent return knowingly. This Judge Brady denied, holding that there was enough to be submitted to the consideration of the jury, and an adjournment was taken to this morning, when counsel will sum up.
